The fact that the jurisdiction of United States Circuit Judge Pardee extends over the State of Texas is accepted as insuring a reversal of any injunction proceedings of any United States district court against the proposed increase of rates, should a district judge be willing to grant a writ, as was done by Judge Speer, of Georgia. Judge Pardee having reversed the decision of Judge Speer, those who are interested in the Texas rates are satisfied that he will take similar action in their cases under similar circumstances. ## TO FORM N. C. LEAGUE

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

RALEIGH, N. C., August 6.—Already there is talk of the formation of an all North Carolina baseball league for next season. Manager R. W. He urges that only in this way can North Carolina come in for the degree of credit she is entitled to in support of the national game, and that it will be found that these towns are admirably grouped for co-operation.

Query.—Will you kindly answer the following question in the columns of your valuable paper? Was there ever a season in the past fifteen years, when, after three strikes, the batter was out, whether the catcher held the ball on the third strike or not—the bases being unoccupied?

Answer.—As far back as the avail able data run, there has been no such rule.

knees and ankles so that no breadth is given here to the silhouette at all, and worn with knee-long tunic-shaped coats, over which sashes are draped about the waist, the coats being in heavy linen, in syk or fine cloth. A sash accompanies many tailor gowns, either inside or outside the coat. The last two weeks have been so cold that all summer gowns have been accompanied by cloaks of unlined liberty satin, tasselled and draped in classic fashion, Greek, Egyptian, Byzantine or Arabian. Tussores printed with quaint, old-fashioned bouquets, with cretonne designs for borders, or with Persian patterns are very smart, and blue and white printed Chinese cotton crepe is being used for summer gowns trimmed with bands of plain blue cotton crepe.

To Wash Chiffon Veils.

Make a suds of warm water and a good pure white soap, dlp the veil in and squeeze the veil gently until all the soil has disappeared. Do not rub at all. Rinse in several waters and pin out on the bed or a flat surface, over which spread a clean sheet, and just before it is dry iron under a clean white cloth. If one does not object to a crepy appearance, it is not necessary to iron chiffon veils at all. Black veils are greatly improved if rusty looking by giving them alcohol and ammonia—a large spoonful of ammonia to enough alcohol to successfully immerse the veil. Dip it ip and squeeze out without wringing, and pin out on a sheet to dry. To Wash Chiffon Vells.

Satin Tie a Smart Collar.

The smartest collar is a satin tie made like a narrow turnover collar, further narrowing toward the front, where it crosses under a single button, the ends being only two inches long.

Finished with Cretonne.

Many of the hats in the shops are finished with a little bit of cretonne lust to add color. Sometimes it borders the satin ribbon which is used for the big cabbage bow, sometimes it appears in a band round the crown and sometimes it is used as a piping around the very edge of the brim. In any case it is pretty and Frenchy, and, indeed, it helps greatly to give a hat that desirable appearance of thought which is the making of every article of dress.
